2015 ANNUAL REPORT
I Can Dream Thanks to My Family

I Can Dream, thanks to my Family
They support me
They are the key to unlocking who I want to be
One day, I’m going to be in construction
And everyone will know my name
Like whoever built Times Square,
Yes, one day I may have the same
But fame and money I don’t mind
But friends and family, God - let them shine
They’re more important and more reliable you see
I can always count on them to be there for me
Through anything, and that’s just how it goes

I love my family, they are my life
My family inspires me, they let me know I can be anything
It’s because of them I can live my dream
Now cheer it, now cheer it, cheer for your fam’
I represent them at this National Poetry SLAM!
I say that with pride
I might even shed a tear
But one thing’s for sure
I will never forget this day, of me standing here.

America SCORES, a national non-profit, serves over 10,000 children at over 175 public and charter schools in 14 major cities. America SCORES’ mission is to inspire urban children to lead healthy lives, be engaged students and have the confidence and character to make a difference in the world. We achieve this mission through daily after school programs that combine soccer, poetry and community service. This holistic, team-based approach works. America SCORES students, 85% of whom qualify for free or reduced lunch, improve academically, increase physical fitness and have a greater sense of confidence and belonging.

Poetry & Soccer

I like poetry because you speak your mind
I like poetry because you speak your rhymes
You can write how you feel, happy or sad
Or you can write something silly, scary, or mad
You can use similes with your line breaks
To build a rhythm that makes you shake
I like soccer because you move your feet
I like soccer because the friends you meet
You can play new positions, forward or back
Stop them from scoring or make an attack
You can show your school spirit and cheer loud
I’m part of SCORES and very proud!

× 7.5 hours/week × 24 weeks = 2 million child-hours of after-school programming in 2015
This year America SCORES poet-athletes celebrated the success of the U.S. Women’s National Team at the Women’s World Cup. Over three weeks, 23 women displayed confidence, hard work, and togetherness to achieve their goals. These are exactly the types of qualities that America SCORES fosters in elementary and middle school students, year-in, year-out. What made the team’s win even more special was its impact on inspiring over 5,000 young girls in our program, nearly half of all poet-athletes.

2015 was a year of continued growth for America SCORES programs, in particular the participation of girls in our core program, which nearly doubled from last year. In a time where, according to the Women’s Sports Foundation, girls have 1.3 million fewer opportunities to play sports in high school than boys, we are proud to continue to give opportunities to young girls to get outside and play. The qualities they learn on the field - teamwork, leadership, commitment - can help in the classroom. Further, the opportunity the program gives - to be on a team, to have a mentor, to be in a safe space after school - can be life-altering.

In such a year of female success, we are honored to highlight several women in this report who have been impacted or made an impact on the program, including the two young alumnæ who visited First Lady Michelle Obama at The White House, the Cleveland coach inspiring some of the city’s best poets, and the board member who rolls up her sleeves as a program volunteer. All of these women have contributed to the success of the program for many years.

Whether you’re a teacher, a principal, a parent, a volunteer, or a funder, thank you for helping us create the SCORES opportunity for thousands of poet-athletes. With your help, we will continue to expand our reach for years to come!

Holly O’Donnell
Executive Director
In July, two DC SCORES alumnae had a special opportunity to visit the White House for First Lady Michelle Obama’s inaugural Beating the Odds Summit. The Summit was created to celebrate high school seniors who overcame challenges in their lives to become first in their families to go to college. Through a series of talks and workshops, the event better prepares students to take advantage of the opportunities ahead.

Ingrid and Leila, who are attending Trinity Washington University and the University of Virginia, respectively, have exemplified their leadership and commitment to DC SCORES as volunteers for several years. The program brought them together as teammates in middle school, and they have remained close friends ever since.

Joining America SCORES National Executive Director Holly O’Donnell on the morning of the big day, the trio waited in an unusually short line before walking into the home of the Obama family. They joined over 130 students from 70 organizations with a deep commitment to post-secondary completion.

After a brief walk around the hallowed halls of the White House, electricity buzzed in the air as everyone settled into the East Room for Mrs. Obama’s opening talk. She was joined on stage by several other luminaries who shared valuable advice about living and studying in college. The day continued with surreal moments: lunch on the White House lawn, breakout sessions in the Red Room and the Green Room, and an afternoon performance by D.C. rapper Wale.

As if that weren’t enough, President Obama paid the students a surprise visit, joking he didn’t quite have the same rapping skills as Wale. Getting serious, he encouraged all students in attendance to follow their dreams, saying the United States would always be a land of opportunity.

For an event hosted at the nexus of American power, the day was focused on the leaders of tomorrow. The feeling throughout the day went beyond reward and celebration. The day was a call to action to promote the value of higher education to an even younger generation. For Ingrid and Leila, longtime leaders in the SCORES community, that won’t be a problem at all.
“Somewhere in this world, there is a powerful person who can help to make change...This person who can make change is you and me.”

With these words, 11-year-old Emma brought to a close a succession of 27 original poems written by the poet-athletes of America SCORES. In addition to moving the audience to laughter, tears, and awe, the performances proved one truth above all: these kids are changing the world.

Against the backdrop of Times Square, America SCORES celebrated the achievements of 27 talented poet-athletes from 14 cities in the U.S. and Canada at the 9th Annual National Poetry SLAM!. Set atop the Thomson Reuters Building, the event was the culmination of months of effort for the SCORES poet-athletes, who were selected out of over 10,000 students to participate. They spent weeks writing, rehearsing, and performing at local slams to prepare for three magical days in New York City, where they performed for over 150 people in attendance and hundreds more watching via live stream.

Over the course of the night, the poet-athletes showcased their hopes, their frustrations, and their dreams. Ranging from pleas to stop violence in their communities to promises to do their homework, the words on display proved how effective poetry can be in unlocking self-expression.

In talking about topics like bullying at their schools or race relations in their neighborhoods, these kids laid down a marker for issues they will continue to care about as they get older. Spurred on by the crowd, each poet-athlete grew in confidence about the impact they could have on their community. Like the New Year’s Eve Ball that glowed behind them, these students shined brightly, changing the world word by word.
Somewhere in the World...

Somewhere in the world, a child is crying facing the pressures in school. Being picked on and bullied because the other kids don’t think he’s cool.

Somewhere in the world, a family has little to eat. Because dad’s job doesn’t pay enough to purchase the food that they need.

Somewhere in the world, girls cannot get a good education. Even though education for all is what we envisioned.

Why is this happening? Because no one took the time to stand up for the child who was uncool.

Because they didn’t want to feel like a fool.

No one cares enough to realize that there are people who are hungry.

The world revolves around taking and being greedy. Education is the key to life but people just don’t know it. They have brains in their heads but just won’t show it.

But somewhere in this world, there is a powerful person who can help to make change. A person who can help out the community and be a friend to lend a hand.

This person is wonder and can come in all shapes and sizes. This person is more than what anyone realizes.

This person is everywhere and close as can be. This person who can make change is you and me.

BRINGING THE NETWORK TOGETHER

SCORES Retreat

America SCORES staff from around the country came together twice this year to celebrate the organization, connect with new people, and share best practices for growing the program.

First, the Executive Directors of each program met in Philadelphia during the National Soccer Coaches Association of America (NSCAA) Convention. Meeting here provided an opportunity for SCORES to be seen by the American soccer community, with many SCORES sponsors present. One such sponsor, Hunt4Soccer, has been vital to America SCORES poet-athletes throughout the country, donating tens of thousands of soccer balls over the years. As a way to show their gratitude, the EDs signed a photo collage of Hunt4Soccer balls in use and presented it to its director Jim Silcock.

The ED meeting also included a SCORES-hosted panel with National Spokesperson Briana Scurry which discussed the gender gap in youth sports in urban areas. This session came between several meetings about growing the program. After 3 days, the SCORES leadership family felt a renewed sense of togetherness and purpose for the year ahead. Many lamented the short time they had and looked forward to the next one.
Next up was a meeting of 35 program staff in Washington, D.C. for the 2015 National Program Retreat. The 3-day summit included professional development training with partners Insperity, a session on bullying prevention with representatives from StopBullying.gov, a talk on program evaluation from Higher Achievement and a chat with founding DC SCORES Board Member Peter Loge.

As one of the few times program representatives from every SCORES city are in the same room together, it was a great time to hear about programs being implemented around the country. This year’s discussions included expansions into Jr. SCORES (K-2nd grades) and Middle School SCORES (6-8th grades). Also discussed was the development of a new poetry curriculum, to be debuted next year.

Other activities included the 2nd Annual SCORES Foosball tournament and a special tour of the White House. The retreat gave the network of tireless team members the opportunity to take a breath and become inspired anew by the amazing effectiveness of the program and of the people doing similar jobs in different communities around the country.

“It’s important to meet and network with staff from around the country not only to share ideas, successes and struggles, but to become reconnected to our passion, what drives each of us to engage in the type of work that we do.

Combining the exceptional skills that each city possesses, and sharing those on a national level, leads to an even stronger program.”

Program Manager
America SCORES Denver
America SCORES was developed in 1994 in Washington, D.C. by a public school teacher concerned that her students, lacking constructive after-school options, were at risk of gang activity and other dangers after class. As she introduced new activities to her students—soccer, poetry, service learning—she found that her students had become more engaged in class, more physically active, and more involved in their communities. Designed as a replicable model, SCORES has grown since becoming a national organization in 1999 to impact over 10,000 students in over 175 public schools in 14 cities in North America — Boston, Chicago, Cleveland, Dallas, Denver, Los Angeles, Milwaukee, New York, Portland (OR), San Francisco, Seattle, St. Louis, Vancouver, and Washington D.C.

Originally focused on elementary school, the program has expanded to meet the demands of its students. With middle school programs, SCORES poet-athletes can stay with their team and continue to have a safe space after school. Similarly, many SCORES sites now offer winter and summer programming, ensuring students can reap the benefits of teamwork and leadership year-round. As students have entered high school and college, programs have emerged to engage alumni and help them graduate high school and prepare for college. In this way, SCORES establishes the platform for students to succeed now and for the future. To date, more than 75,000 urban youth have benefited from the unique programming of America SCORES.

Passing to my friends

Doing poetry, writing on my paper
Try to finish my last sentence
I finish my poem, it’s 5 sentences long
Telling my poem to the kids

America SCORES New England has been at the Mario Umana Academy for over 9 years. As much as the team has become an institution in the school, it is the students that give the team its spirit. Three students from the middle school team were asked about their SCORES experience:

On Teamwork

Diana G. describes her team as a supportive family unit. “Teamwork means that even in good and bad times we pick each other up and make sure we are still together and that we are family, because this team is a family.”

Amlak K. says it is all about “playing together, not playing by yourself, you have to work as a team. You have to try not to play for yourself but for each other.”

The welcoming atmosphere of the Umana allows students like Randy G., new to the country and the school, to feel a sense of belonging. He says, in his native Spanish: “Que nosotros nos estamos esforzando. Nosotros estamos juntos y de acuerdo a lo que vamos a hacer.” (We are striving because we are all together and have the same goals).

On Practice

Coaches have instilled the importance of active...
Teamwork

participation during practices, not only to provide poet-athletes the opportunity to gain new skills, but also to create a sense of community.

“We practice and write poems together,” says Amlak, “As you practice as a team, you learn new things like passing and dribbling. It’s also fun to write and perform our poems. We get to perform it in front of other teams. Since it gets filmed, we get to see it and share it online.”

On SCORES

The benefits of the team extend beyond soccer skills. Diana uses SCORES as a way to channel her energy: “SCORES helps me get my mind off things so when I come back to school I am ready to learn.”

For Randy, SCORES allowed him to make new friends. “No conocía a nadie y conoci e hice amigos hasta con gente de otra clase.” (I didn’t know anybody, and I was able to meet and make new friends with people from other grades).

The knowledge that the team gained during their writing sessions is now being used in their everyday English class. Amlak affirms, “Since I learned about poetry in SCORES, it has helped me when we started learning about it in class.”

On Future Poet-Athletes

Despite differences in language, culture, and upbringing, all the students agreed that to represent SCORES is an honor and signifies that you are not only a great soccer player, but also committed to being a dedicated student and member of the community.

As for advice for future poet-athletes? Diana, Randy and Amlak are all in agreement: “Get prepared to work with older people and work with these new teammates. You are going to realize that in school and on the field you have these people to support you.”
This year, staff from different America SCORES offices stepped away from work for a few days to attend the American Express Leadership Academy in New York City.

A chance to reflect on how they interact with those around them in a professional context, the Leadership Academy served as an excellent resource and motivator for our staff to serve their programs’ poet-athletes. Representing Boston, Cleveland, New York City, and Washington, D.C., eight staff members took part in the professional development opportunity.

Hosted by the Center for Creative Leadership, the Leadership Academy network includes many nonprofit partners and nine different programs that take place around the world throughout the year. The program’s intent is to focus on “building the personal, business and leadership skills needed to run a successful nonprofit organization.” To read more about the American Express Leadership Academy, visit its website.

Our staff members joined dozens of non-profit leaders from around the country to discuss best practices and gain insight into how understanding their personalities can improve their working environments.

After the Academy was complete, we asked them to reflect on their experience and what the Academy meant for them as non-profit professionals:
“The AmEx Leadership Academy was a tremendous opportunity to clarify my strengths, reassess my challenges, and reinvigorate my commitment to my work. I’m very grateful for the opportunity to take part in such a great program and to be part of an alumni network of such outstanding peers.”

Chris Bentson
America SCORES New England

“The Academy taught me how important it is to know yourself in order to successfully lead others. We spent most of the week reviewing personality and work style assessments, plus feedback from coworkers, and then we explored how personal traits and preferences influence our unique leadership styles. They say ‘fill your cup first in order to fill others.’ That rang true this week.”

Jacqui Kemp
DC SCORES

“The AmEx Leadership Academy allowed me to reflect, learn, and grow in so many different areas of leadership, and on levels that I would not have been able to otherwise achieve.”

Paul Khacherian
America SCORES Cleveland

“The AmEx Leadership Academy was a fantastic professional development opportunity to become self-aware and thus empowered of one’s leadership style and how it can relate to creating a successful working environment at our respective organizations. Through this training, I was able to better identify strengths and weaknesses within my leadership to be able to better strengthen myself moving forward as I grow in my leadership capacity. Participating within the program made me proud to have been offered the opportunity by my organization as well as inspired to continue along an upward trajectory.”

CLEVELAND

Tanesha Madden was born and raised in Cleveland, Ohio and attended The University of Akron majoring in Early Childhood Education. She later switched her major to Business Administration with a concentration in Management and attended Strayer University. She has been employed with Cleveland Metropolitan School District for nine years as an Paraprofessional Instructional Assistant. Madden has also worked for Welcome House Inc., assisting individuals with disabilities, for the past 12 years. She has a genuine desire to help people in need.

Madden started with America SCORES as a substitute writing coach in the spring of 2011. The following season she became a full time writing coach, and within the year was coaching five days a week, for both soccer and writing. In the fall of 2013 she added the role of school liaison and has continued in this position. Under her leadership, the SCORES program at her school has had high enrollment, and large, measureable gains in both writing and fitness each year. Her writing teams consistently place in the top rankings at our SCORES Annual Poetry SLAM!, and the program produces talented individual poets as well.

“I have enjoyed watching the students develop leadership, team chemistry, and take pride in their original works of poetry.”

When I Close My Eyes

Firefox was a magical creature who always loved to play
So bright and cheerful,
Each and every day
Then one day,
Along came a new friend.
She thought the fun would never end,
But she saw things weren’t always as they seemed.
She saw strange and wild things.
So she went to the only other person that was sane,
Zhaniah lived down on huckleberry lane,
She said “Dear, Mother, what do you think is wrong?”
I think we’ve been here far too long.
So they packed their bags and went on their way,
Then along came a cute kitty stray.
“Aww, Mom, can we keep him, he’s so fun.
“No! We have to leave, c’mon, let’s run.”
So they ran away faster than an ape,
The stray started to change shape.
The cat went from pink to white to pink and white,
He became a shift changing creature of the night.
Once the transformation was complete,
The sun saw a creature so strange and obsolete.

But it was a shell, a cover too,
Guess who popped out, guess who.
It was Firefox, the fox from Nimbalo,
She just played a trick on you!
Happy trails and happy fun,
That’s the end of Chapter 1.
Can’t wait to see you soon good friend,
I hope your fun will never end.

A board member since 2012, A.J. Twombly has worked to develop partnerships and strengthen the impact of the National Poetry SLAM! for America SCORES. She worked at Goldman Sachs and the Central Intelligence Agency prior to coming to American Express, where she is the Airline and Rental Car Director, Global Client Group. Through her role at the company, she spearheaded America SCORES’ partipation in the AmEx Leadership Academy.

Says A.J. of the importance of the program: “At the end of the school day, students in our programs are able to head to a nurturing community, where their creativity is allowed to blossom. SCORES students learn soccer and poetry, but they also learn about friendship, community, and resilience. These experiences make all the difference in their lives.”

“My favorite experience was spending the day volunteering at NY SCORES, during a soccer tournament. I loved getting to know the kids and the parents and had a wonderful time face painting.”

DONOR PROFILE

News Corp

As an official News Corp Philanthropy Partner, America SCORES has worked with the media giant to create more opportunities for youth in New York City, Washington D.C., and Los Angeles, and to expand the reach of the National Poetry SLAM!. The partnership has also included unique opportunities for collaboration.

In July, poet-athletes from America SCORES New York went to News Corp headquarters to meet staff members and receive newly built bicycles, built by News Corp’s audit team as part of a teambuilding event. America SCORES was chosen to receive the bike donation because of its emphasis on being healthy and active.

The day was a great reminder of how non-profit and corporate partners can work together to benefit everyone. For the SCORES poet-athletes, it was a reward for being exemplary students and a unique opportunity to get a new bike. For the News Corp staff, it was an opportunity to come closer together as a team and feel like they’re making a tangible impact in the community.

“The corporate world often doesn’t allow for extra-curricular activities, so if SCORES can provide an opportunity for employees to hang out with kids and inspire them in the process, I think it’s a win-win.”
